How To SELECT The Right Motorcycle Accident Attorney

Those who cause accidents should pay for the injuries that result. Motorcycle accidents can result in injuries that are even more devastating than car accidents for the simple fact that cyclists have such little protection surrounding them. They're smaller than vehicles and therefore often get lost in the blind spots of other motorists. From TBIs and spinal cord injuries to road rash and broken bones, many devastating injuries can take place.

In the event you or a loved one is injured in a motorcycle accident, you need someone on your side to fight for the compensation you will surely need to pay your medical bills. That's why you need a motorcycle accident lawyer in Lancaster like Kuzyk Law that has decades of experience fighting for the rights of the injured.

It can be overwhelming at this time to consider your injuries, the long road ahead and how you will pay for it all. While it may be the last thing you want to think about, it's important to do some research into which motorcycle accident lawyer you will select to represent you. We have compiled this list of tips to guide you along.

Focus on Expertise

Many lawyers offer many specialty areas. You want to find one that specializes not only in personal injury law, but motorcycle accidents as well. Because injury law grows more complex every year, comprehensive knowledge and experience are both critical in achieving a fair settlement for your claim. Don't doubt for a minute that the insurance adjuster on the other side of the claim knows exactly what they're doing. You need an equal or greater match of wits from a motorcycle lawyer who can go toe to toe with the insurance companies. You can't always get this knowledge from books. There is no substitute for in-the-trenches experience over several decades that's fundamentally necessary in winning favorable verdicts and settlements.

Read up on Reviews

Reviews and client testimonials can tell you a lot about the caliber of attorney you're considering. Even more valuable are word of mouth reviews from your friends and family who have used a particular lawyer before and were happy with the results. But it's not always just the results you need to look at. You also want a motorcycle accident lawyer in Lancaster who is compassionate, attentive and willing to go the extra mile.

Interview the Attorney

During your free initial consultation, you will have a chance to ask questions of the attorney to put your mind at ease. Some good questions to ask include:

- ✓ What is your rate and how do you charge? Keep in mind most reputable lawyers won't charge you a penny unless and until you win or settle.
- ✓ Do I have a case, based on your initial understanding of the facts?
- ✓ How many cases similar to mine have you handled?
- ✓ What is your strategy? Remember, each lawyer has a proven strategy for winning cases and reaching settlements. While some are aggressive and leave nothing to chance, others take a more laid-back, methodical approach.
- ✓ How long will the process take? Be aware that it can take months or years to resolve your case, depending on a variety of factors like the amount of damages being sought, the complexity of your case, and the need for extensive investigations.

Check for Adequate Resources

A larger law firm will have more resources at its disposal than a small one, generally. You want a motorcycle accident lawyer who has the resources to thoroughly investigate your claim. This is a costly expense, one you want handled as efficiently as possible. Many larger law firms have teams of people working for you, from the lawyer to the paralegals. Your case may require the hiring of an accident reconstruction expert, for example, who can recreate the scene, and find the witnesses and police statements to corroborate your side of the story. Your lawyer may also need to consult with a brain surgeon to find out just how extensive your TBI is and what the future will hold in terms of rehab and medical visits. That all takes money, and the law firm you choose should be well established and able to take those tasks on.
